Today's Top Stories

1. Power cuts scheduled across Auldhabn

As part of a series of planned upgrades to the power infrastructure across Auldhabn, next week a number of power cuts will take place in all districts beginning with Kongenshabn and ending with Nyborg. The Department of Energy has released guidance in English, Danish, and Havlandic on its website.

2. Election campaigning period begins

While parties have already released their 2027 manifestos, today the election campaigning period officially begins in anticipation of highly tense elections in July. The DDP (Danish Party) is looking to extend its hold on the Havlandic government as well as look into nominating important judges, as a number of prominent High Court judges will likely retire before the 2031 elections.

3. "Good Morning Havland" mired in controversy

Hosts of the popular talk show "Good Morning Havland" have come under fire after suggesting that a second DDP term was "inevitable" in the face of the "profound environmental, social, and migration pressures in Europe". Hans Nyhavn denied charges of fearmongering and racial sentiments, stating that he was merely "reporting the facts on the ground".
